

THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON.
THURSDAY, March 19, 1896.
CROSBY S. NOYES, Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation much more than the combined circulation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

In order to avoid delays, on account of personal absence, letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, to the Editor or Business Department, according to tenor or purpose.

Another Grade-Crossing Victim.

It is slow work, this persuading the steam railroad companies that it is the humanity, proper and businesslike thing to abolish grade crossings within the city. Unofficially and without any apparent enthusiasm representatives of the great corporations admit the desirability of elevated or depressed tracks, and once in awhile they chat hopefully about the vast and expensive improvements that they may hope to see inaugurated and in operation. Occasionally there comes a cheerful and inspiring sound from the Capitol—a few words indicative of Congressional interest in the homicidal conditions which are permitted by Congress to exist in the meantime lives being sacrificed and property being lost. The grade-crossing victim, however, woman are being crippled through collision with engines and cars against which the public is insufficiently protected. At an inquest held in this city yesterday the jury censured the Baltimore and Potomac Railway Company for running engines backward across public thoroughfares without equipping the engines with sufficient lights on the rear as well as the front. To this verdict the coroner added a recommendation for electric lights instead of gas lamps at grade crossings. The chances are that a powerfully re-elected light house officer, Mr. Wheel, No. 53 last Monday night, when he would not have been killed. An electric arc-light might also have been a preventative. By and by the grade-crossing will be no more, for many influences are combining to its urban elimination, but in the interim the companies should make use of every available device to make the work of elevation or depression as costly as possible. It is not to be undertaken with reasonable deliberation but the financial consideration is not to be advanced when human life is in the balance; and it is possible to be over-deliberate.

Home-Idol Italy.

If Italy's national tendency toward homicide could only be centered upon King Menekle's Abyssinian warriors the craft and pugnacious Italy would soon be defeated. Baron Garofalo discussed the statistics of homicide in Italy before a Roman audience recently and threw considerable light upon a matter which may be interesting alike to Italians and tourists who may be sojourners in Italy. During 1885, said the baron, the total number of murders in Italy was about four thousand, or one homicide every two hours. In no other civilized country does such a sanguinary condition of affairs prevail, the ratio even in available France being only one-tenth of the Italian, while in Denmark, the best behaved of European countries—the ratio is one thirty-fifth. The baron declared, after careful investigation of the subject, that Italy's phenomenally sanguinary disposition is due to the vendetta, the duello, and to the unrestrained influences of heredity. No effective effort to better the prevailing conditions seems to have been made, for ever since 1842 there has been steady increase of delinquency and mendacity to such an extent that criminals and beggars abound in all Italian communities. The remedy, says the baron who so frankly criticizes his own people, can only come through religious instruction. Purely moral teaching is good enough, he gives to religion the credit for a fifty per cent reduction of delinquency and mendacity within forty years in Great Britain and the United States.

For Honesty in Elections.

Ohio's legislature has just passed a good example by passing the amended bill to prevent the corrupt use of money in elections. The act provides that each candidate shall furnish to the authorities a sworn statement of all expenditures by him or for him in a political campaign. It furthermore provides that candidates may use money for personal expenses only, the limit being in the ratio of $100 for every five thousand votes. It is quite probable that the law will be violated—all laws are—but the candidate who gets caught will thereafter be ineligible to hold office. With a fate like that staring him in the face, it may be that even the least scrupulous of candidates will be compelled to honesty.

Knows When It Has Enough.

Philanthropic interest in the Associated Charities is likely to be enhanced in the future because the association knows when it has funds sufficient for its purposes and notifies the public to cease contributing. Some days ago the association found it necessary to appeal to big-hearted Washingtonians; the weather was distressingly inclement and requests for assistance were pouring in from sources not to be ignored. There was immediate response and, consequently, immediate relief for the suffering. Having money enough now, the emergency committee gives expression to its gratitude and asks the generously-inclined to keep their dollars until another season.

Probably the Supervising Architect of the Treasury knows when he is doing when he authorizes such construction as is now being slowly proceeded with on the city post-office building, but plain people who are not in official life find it difficult to understand why there should be so much of woodwork in the roofing. It was generally understood that the building in question was to be fire-proof, but the appearance of large quantities of lumber is evidence of a conclusion to give the old "fire-burn" a chance.

Major McKinley's managers have acted on the assumption that the boom which confines itself to one state is as much out of date as the circus which performs in but one ring.

Considering how little the labor accomplishes and how expensive fuel is at the present time, the large amount of burning-in-factory that is going on seems very wasteful.

The Senate, in relying on the fact that large bodies of men slowly, should bear in mind that they also have a tendency to keep right on in the same direction.

A Most Orderly Community.

There is no reasonably solid ground on which to base fears that in the absence of a so-called "Sunday rest" law, Washington merchants, or any considerable proportion of them, would do business with the public on Sunday. It is an undisputed and indisputable fact that this is probably the best behaved city in the country on Sunday and it may confidently asserted that it is so not because the law demands it but because it is the general disposition of Washington to be orderly.

Nowhere do the people appreciate more thoroughly the advantages of a restful day in seven and it is undoubtedly that if it were certain that there was complete absence of all statutory provision as to the closing of stores on Sundays the conditions would not be likely to suffer any material change. Public sentiment is much more powerful than even an act of Congress, and public sentiment would speedily make itself felt should there arise any necessity for rebelling those who have no regard for either the religious or physical demands which have made Sunday an unquestionable necessity.

There are, of course, many thousands of people resident in the District of Columbia who are by no means regular in their attendance upon the many and varied services conducted by those who toil steadily and faithfully for the betterment of themselves and their fellow creatures, but the absentees are not to be reached by legislation. If it shall be shown that a "Sunday rest" law is essential to the maintenance of decency and order at the national capital The Star will surely be found among its advocates and supporters, but at present the community does not seem to need the application of such a stringent measure as that which has been proposed and is now being discussed.

Don't Rush to Alaska.

An Alaska gold-craze is threatened, and hundreds of men are preparing to start for the placer-diggings of that most remote possession of the United States. That some of these venturesome ones will succeed is reasonably certain, and in the course of two or three years there may be several Alaska millionaires, but the great majority of the gold-seekers will have their trouble for their pains. The Star has no desire to discourage the man who seeks to make a fortune either in Alaska or anywhere else, but it is only fair to warn the "tenderfoot" that many and serious obstacles lie in the way and that mining is nature's most attractive lottery-scheme. The Alaska summers in the vicinity of the placers are short, hot and overburdened with mosquitoes and other pestiferous insects; the winters are exceedingly long and excessively cold. Food is expensive and work for would-be wage-earners is scarce. If a strong, vigorous, stout-hearted man with money enough to live upon for a year or two while he is developing his claims, and if he is not particularly in love with civilized society, he may do a little better on Forty-mile Creek than he would in business in one of the states; he may, if fortunate or persistent, achieve great wealth. The average man, though, and the man who has no capital and the man who would suffer from the sickness had better remain in these latitudes until the hardy pioneers have amended residential and business conditions in the very far northwest.

During the present era of enthusiasm over home rule for Ireland and home rule for Cuba, Washington begs to mention that she would like to have one of her old appointed recorder of deeds occasionally.

It looks as if Corbett would have to be content for a time with fostering his reputation as a man who might whip the champion if the champion would give him a chance.

Mr. Hale is entitled to the privilege of inquiring what time the Senate will get to accomplish anything if it is proposed to verify every utterance made by its members.

Mr. McKinley is being reminded every now and then that no matter what field of usefulness a man may select in this era he is bound to encounter a great deal of competition.

Mr. Roosevelt may derive some sustaining comfort from the fact that as astute a practical politician as T. C. Platt may find thirty New York an embarrassing problem.

Senator Hale's constituents will not be likely to point with pride to the resolution of thanks sent to the Senator by the Spanish in Havana.

In the present surplus of war clouds, the fighting in Nicaragua fails to get the interested attention that it ordinarily commands.

Every once in a while something occurs to remind the political boss that he is more of a local issue than a national question.

General Weyler appears to be an adept in the kind of reform whose course is run as soon as the prospectus is issued.

New York is not yet certain as to which will succeed in taking the other out of politics, Mr. Platt or the liquor question.

It looks as if Italy would content herself with denouncing Mr. Menekle as a very impertinent person.

General Weyler has not yet entered a libel suit against anybody.

SHOOTING STARS.
The Ideal and the Real.
The poet said his vernal ode—
A rhyme of buds and sylvan views,
And from the proceeds purchased first
A good stout pair of overhoses.

"If you argue with me or smalt man," said Uncle Eben, "you done git de dust ob it, and if you argue with me or fool yoh done wa'e yoh time."

A Comparison.
The man of finance who had ventured into politics was looking thoughtfully over his accounts.

"It sometimes takes a good deal of money to start a man in the line of his ambition," he remarked.

"It's money that makes the mare go," his secretary answered.

"Very true. But I don't believe it takes near as much money to make the mare go as it does to make the dark horse go."

Sensitive.
"Did I hear you saying something about coming in like a lion and going out like a lamb?" said General Weyler indignantly.

"Yes," replied the subordinate. "I had reference to the method of electing Senators and not to the method of electing Senators and not to the method of electing Senators."

"Oh! Er—ahem—you see, I was afraid you were forgetting yourself and getting slightly personal."

Ups and Downs.
"I dunno," said Mr. Cumore with a tinge of sadness in his voice, "but what we heve ez many disappointments ez we did before we made that lump of money. I git the blues every once in awhile the same as ever."

"Well," she answered, "life is always having its ups and downs, you know."

"You speak the truth, as usual, Maria. But with you ways tryin' to keep up the state and always tryin' to keep down the expenses, I re'ly dunno but what we're gettin' a little more our share."

Ripans
Tabules.

Mrs. Mathilda Cohn of No. 529 San Pablo avenue, Oakland, California, in an interview by Mr. H. Lissner of No. 925 Broadway in the same city, on the 26th of July, 1895, said: "I am using the second box of those Tabules you recommended. They do wonders for me, and I would not be without them now for any money. Two days ago I went to an evening party and ate a hearty supper at 11 p.m. I felt so well after using the first box that I thought I was cured of my dyspepsia, but I suffered for it the next day. O, how sick I was! but I took two Tabules and they brought me out of bed that same day. Now I take one after each meal and feel fine, but I will take better care of what I eat after this."

Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists, or by mail if the price (50 cents a box) is sent to The Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce st., New York. Sample vial, 10 cents.
